CANDIDATES CARDS

To the Voters of Appomattox, Buckingham, Cumberland and Charlotte Counties, constituting the Eleventh State Senatorial District of Virginia:

After mature consideration, I have decided to become a candidate for the office of State Senator from the Eleventh District, subject to the Democratic primary of August 6. I will appreciate the support of my friends.

E. Z. KING

I wish to announce myself a candidate for State Senator from the Eleventh senatorial district of Virginia, comprising the counties of Appomattox, Buckingham, Charlotte and Cumberland, subject to the Democratic primary of August 6. I earnestly solicit the support of the people of the district and look to the opportunity of seeing you personally during the campaign.

Respectfully,

ELLA S. MOORE, JR.

Some days in high schools, and high gov ings in colleges, recently organized a "strike" to express their horror of war.

War is horrific; it should be, and eventually will be, unnecessary. But there is some good in all evil, and young students and others should reflect on past wars and what modern civilization owes to them.

Germany wants colonies, and is embarrassed by the fact that this would mean taking in a great many black Indian and gentlemen that by no stretch of the imagination could be called "Aryan." The German government announces that, while it could not admit negroes to German citizenship, as Britain does in her colonies, black ex-landed negroes would be "thoroughly welcome," with every right except the right to adopt Aryan girls.

WASHINGTON.—The "trial-balloon" method of testing out public opinion on a proposed policy or program of action was never more conspicuously employed than in the case of the President's announcement that he would ask congress for a huge work relief fund of $4,000,000,000 to be spent during the next two years. Before the message was delivered to congress, the White House had released to the press a statement by Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, outlining the general plan of the work relief program. Then, after the message had been read to congress, Mr. Roosevelt himself gave out a statement explaining the purposes of the huge fund.

Thus, the public was given a chance to react to the plan before the President committed himself to it. Had the reaction been unfavorable, he could have withdrawn the proposal without loss of face. But the reaction was favorable, and the President went ahead with his program.

Mr. Roosevelt's message to congress was a remarkable document. It was a frank statement of the fact that the government has been unable to balance the budget, and that it will be impossible to do so for some years to come. It was a statement of the fact that the government has been borrowing money to meet relief expenditures, and that it will continue to do so. It was a statement of the fact that the government has been unable to collect enough taxes to meet relief expenditures, and that it will be unable to do so in the future. It was a statement of the fact that the government has been unable to meet relief expenditures out of current revenues, and that it will be unable to do so in the future.
